

Employee Violence Prevention Program

Identifying the risks and developing solutions for the prevention of employee violence.

This corporate training program is designed to help management develop the knowledge and skills necessary to reduce the risk of violence in the workplace.

Identifying the risks and developing solutions for the prevention of employee violence.

Training objectives are to increase management's understanding of the root causes of rage and violence followed by identification of signs and symptoms associated with violent behaviors. Additional goals include the development of skills to effectively manage an emotionally volatile employee and to utilize a consultation network when it is necessary, to help resolve a crisis.

Implementation of this program will take place in two phases. First, with an in-depth organizational assessment for potential employee rage and violence. The second, with consultation and training services.

About

Michael J. Woulas, Ph.D. is a licensed psychotherapist with specialties including the treatment of adult and pediatric mood disorders, attention deficit and hyperactive disorders, chronic pain syndrome and addictions.

Throughout a thirty-year career, providing behavioral healthcare services, he has been diagnosing and treating most forms of depression and related mood disorders. In addition to his psychological education and training, he received osteopathic medical training which has augmented his skills as a clinician. Dr. Woulas was a consultant to the Central Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association and established the first psychological screening program for the recruitment of law enforcement officers in the region. After relocating to Florida, Dr. Woulas developed the first training program in the state for jail suicide prevention. He also consulted with local real estate firms and assisted with the recruitment of sales agents.

Dr. Woulas speaks publicly, and offers local seminars and discussion groups on domestic and social violence, as well as training in marital and family relations. He has been in private practice in Southwest Florida since 1985, where he currently lives with his wife, and is a father of three sons.

He is also the author of THE TICKING TIME BOMB: ANGER, RAGE, AND EMOTIONAL VOLATILITY OF BIPOLAR DISORDER, TYPE II. His book is a practical guide to raise public awareness of the causes for today's violence in families and society.
